(The Women get their support from us)

THIS is not the motto of the Governesses' Benevolent Institution, but it might well be applied to a Society which for over 100 years has ministered to the needs of the Women Private Teachers profession.

Queen's College, the first Public School for Girls, was founded by the G.B.I. in 1847, and among its pupils were the pioneers of higher education for girls as we now know it.

Speaking at a Public Meeting of the G.B.I. in May, 1947, the Dean of Westminster referred to the fact that two of the moving spirits in the foundation of Queen's College were Chenevix Trench and Charles Kingsley, the one a Dean and the other a Canon of Westminster Abbey.

In his Address to the Centenary Meeting of the G.B.I. in 1943, the Rt. Hon. R. A. Butler, the then President of the Board of Education, said "We cannot speak too highly in the Government of your achievements in the welfare and relief of those who have devoted their lives to the care of children. As education becomes more organised and more conducted through official channels, there is a grave danger that unofficial help and effort will be crowded out."

*Voluntary effort is as necessary to-day as ever it was.
Will you do what you can to support one of its Agents?*

THE GREAZE

VICTORY IN THE BALANCE: THE DEAN EXAMINES THE SCALES

BY an interesting coincidence Shrove Tuesday this year fell in the same week as the bicentenary of the birth of Jeremy Bentham, in whose autobiography occurs the first recorded mention of the Greaze.

In Bentham's day the Greaze was a free-for-all rough-and-tumble. Keynote of the 1948 Greaze, on the other hand, was comfort—at any rate for the spectators. For the first time chairs were provided for visitors, School was re-roofed and heated, and there was no danger, as last year, that the weather might interfere with the ceremony. At the first throw the pancake hit the bar, bounced off, and landed out of play amongst the parents. The second throw was more successful. A skimming shot just cleared the bar, and the competitors, following up closely, hurled themselves against the eastern wall of School. For the next two minutes they gave a good imitation of the Eton Wall Game, and when time was called Old Etonian parents were predicting a draw. A pair of scales gave the Guinea by a fraction of an ounce to J. J. Potter, whose father, Stephen Potter, won the Greaze in 1917.

THE PANCAKE GUINEA

Once again the Dean was unable to secure a gold piece for the winner of the Pancake, although he made petition to no less an authority than the Governor of the Bank of England. The problem, however, has now been solved for all time. Reading in the provincial press of this tragedy Lt. Col. W. E. C. Lunn-Rockcliffe immediately made an offer to the School of a guinea-piece of the reign of George III, which could be presented annually as a symbolic award and later exchanged for current coin. The offer was readily accepted, and we take this opportunity of expressing our grateful thanks to the donor for this generous gesture.

ATHLETICS

THE news that Athletics were not a compulsory sport this year may come as something of a surprise to some of our readers. Some will doubtless consider that Westminster has thereby gone even further to the dogs than before—and that is a feeling common to all Old Boys. Others will consider that in making Athletics a voluntary sport we make an essential statement of faith in the individual's ability to know what is good for himself and to make his own choice.

The step was taken not without anxiety. Where should we be if the response was negligible, and only a dozen boys were willing to do Athletics? But that anxiety was fortunately ill-founded, and the response proved adequate to ensure a good season. The reasons for this change were many. Fields were unusable, and coaching had to take place up Groves, and so it was hardly fair to compel people to go to such lengths in order to take part in an activity to which they often felt, if not averse, at least apathetic. Furthermore as can be said of all sports, it is more gratifying both for those organising and for those organised, if they are all doing the thing because they enjoy it, and not because unimaginative organisers can find no alternative. Nor, on the other hand, can we approve of a state of affairs whereby all athletes have to run all distances and try their hand at all events in an essentially specialised sport.

Let us be quite honest with ourselves, and admit that Athletics do not merit the pre-eminent place they have held at Westminster in the past. No other sport is compulsory for all—why make an exception in the case of Athletics, the least suitable of all?

Not by any stretch of the imagination can they be said to promote team-spirit. Even in a relay it is the individual, or at best the group of individuals, that wins the day. The competitor runs for himself—points gained for the House are incidental. That may hurt the idealist, but it is a statement of unpleasant fact, and not a disparaging statement at that. Athletics are a fine sport, but they do not deserve a compulsory status. If alternatives can be found, as they have been, there is no reason why, just for four weeks in the year, a boy should be obliged to do one particular station. This year's experiment began as a temporary measure suggested by our inability to use Fields. But the experiment has been more than justified, so let us hope it will prove to be permanent.

Mr. R. M. BARRINGTON WARD

ALL the sons and friends of Westminster will have heard with profound regret of the untimely death of Mr. R. M. Barrington-Ward. His work had overstrained his health and under medical advice he had taken a sea-voyage with Mrs. Barrington-Ward: he died at Dar-es-Salaam on February 29th. To her and to their three children our truest sympathy goes out.

It would be hard for anyone, and impossible for the present writer, to do justice to one who achieved so much so unobtrusively, and it is mainly of his Westminster interests that we can claim to speak with any personal knowledge. The facts of his career are soon told. Fourth of the five brothers who all came to Westminster and all achieved distinction in widely different fields, he was a King's Scholar from 1903-1909 and Captain of the School. He went with a scholarship to Balliol, gained a First in Mods. and became President of the Union. Already a marked man in his generation, he was more at home in the present than the past: this perhaps explains why he did not win the highest class in Greats. Until the outbreak of the first war he was Secretary to the Editor of The Times, gaining, and making, his earliest impressions in the journalism which was to be his chosen path. By inclination a speaker and writer, he yet proved himself a fine soldier in the field. After being wounded in 1917, he was placed on the General Staff and won the M.C. and the D.S.O. In 1919 he did not return to The Times which was still controlled by Lord Northcliffe, but worked with J. L. Garvin on The Observer for eight years. In 1927 he returned to The Times to serve again under his former chief, Mr. Geoffrey Dawson, and in 1941 he succeeded him as Editor. The school telegraphed their congratulations from Bromyard, and he replied at once in his own hand that there was no praise of which he was more proud.

The Editor of The Times holds a key-point in the life of the country. Barnes, Delane, Buckle, to name but a few: it is a great inheritance for a man. He meets the highest in the land; he knows many secrets; his influence, though of narrower range than some journalists command, is far deeper, and the stronger for being anonymous. Mr. Barrington-Ward was a brilliant speaker, recognised even by Balliol, together with Archbishop Lang, as being the best they could provide at any college festivity: he was as firm and as trenchant with the pen as with the tongue. Such gifts often go with the temperament that likes applause and makes the casual allusion to illustrious names. Mr. Barrington-Ward was just the opposite: small, quiet, sincere and modest to the roots of his being, he combined a Greek versatility with the gravity of a Roman.

These gifts were of the greatest service to the School especially in the difficult years of the war. As a member of the Finance Committee, subsequently its chairman, and a member of the Governing Body, his conversance with affairs, his knowledge of all kinds of men including schoolmasters, and above all his steady devotion to the School made themselves felt in many wise decisions, small and great. He composed the eloquent appeal for the War Memorial Fund. The Times was always at hand to chronicle the doings of the school, and he personally never missed a chance, as the present writer can testify, to speak the word of well-wishing or of warning or of comfort. A witty note of good wishes after the Royal visit to the Play; a line of sympathy and high spirits in the "Munich" evacuation of the following year; a leisurely letter to an invalid, promising to look out for the rarer Trollopes second-hand—all that made one forget his unceasing burden of responsibility and his assiduous hard work. Once the writer caught a glimpse of him at full stretch in his office at Printing House Square about eleven p.m. In a moment he had set aside his cares and was eager to welcome the latest news from Westminster. Modesty was his prime virtue and we may, in the words of Browning whom he read and relished,

"Leave him still loftier than the world
Living and dying."

THE LATE Mr. J. R. TURNER

WE had taken our regretful farewell of the Bursar in 1946, hoping that he would be granted a further span of years in which to enjoy at leisure his many activities and many friendships. This was not to be: after a serious operation from which he seemed to be making a good recovery, he died in January.

He was School Bursar for fourteen years, and officially Westminster owes him a great debt for his unremitting vigilance over the school premises and the school accounts at a time when financial problems were heavy and complicated. Unofficially perhaps we owe him yet more. From the first he threw himself genially into the life of the School, sharing our gossip and soothing our grumbles. He liked boys and children of every age, and they liked him: but he was equally ready to welcome Old Westminsters senior or junior, and bore with disarming cheerfulness such interruptions in the work of the Bursary.

During the war he remained in London as the guardian of our buildings and commander of the working-staff whom he called his "garrison." The School might well have suffered yet greater damage if he and his men had not remained at their post.

The leading features of his character were his optimism and his loyalty. However dark the news at home or abroad the Bursar could always descry a ray of light somewhere in The Evening Standard. Himself a loyal son of Eton and King's, he was no less loyal to Westminster which had educated his son, a pillar of the school cricket for more than one season, and his brother, Mr. F. G. Turner, Head Master of Tormore.

He was loyal also to his many links with the Burma Trading Company with whom he had spent many happy years before he joined us.

He was a man of tireless physical activity, proficient at games and amazingly well-informed about the performances of great cricketers and athletes, from the giants of his youth down to the latest prodigy in the Eton XI. Indeed he viewed life, with its triumphs and difficulties, rather like a game of cricket: while waiting for his operation he said that he didn't mind going in to bat, but it was this waiting in the pavilion that he found trying. The remark was characteristic: under the guise of cheerful high spirits he fain would have hidden, both from himself and others, a strong and simple courage. His friends will remember him as one who, in Tennyson's words, "With a frolic welcome took the thunder and the sunshine." "You and I are old" the poet continues: but that could never be said of Rex Turner.

* * *

A correspondent writes: "Rex Turner's Election at Eton always looked on him with affection and as a bit of a hero. He was captain of College Wall and Cricket, a member of Pop, and at Cambridge captain of the King's Cricket XI. His modesty hid the fact that he was a leading figure in Burma for many years, and, had he returned, he might certainly have expected a decoration for his services as General Manager of his Company. But he preferred what the world would have thought a much humbler post in order to be back in England with his family."

THE SCHOOL CONCERT

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD J. DENT, D. MUS.

WESTMINSTER is justly proud of having nurtured so distinguished a musician as Sir Adrian Boult, and it was appropriate that he should open the first concert in the newly restored School by conducting a performance of Beethoven's overture "The Consecration of the House." It is a work that is rarely played now, as its austere dignity seems forbidding to romantically-minded audiences. Beethoven openly confessed in it his profound veneration for Handel, whose ghost might well have walked in from the Abbey to listen to Sir Adrian's impressive interpretation of it.

Both the chorus and the orchestra were heard to great advantage in "Three Festive Carols" composed by Mr. Arnold Foster. Recent years have produced a huge crop of bogus antiques in the "olde Englysshe tea-Shoppe" style; Mr. Foster's music is modern and thoroughly genuine, spirited, well written for both voices and instruments, so that it was brilliantly effective. These Carols are admirably suited to a school musical society and it may be hoped that they will be widely taken up by choral societies of all kinds, for they are works of quite outstanding merit.

Fifty years ago the oboe was regarded as an instrument of such exceptional difficulty that no amateur could ever dream of attempting it. Nowadays wind instruments seem to be almost more popular than stringed with amateur players, and Handel's Concerto in B flat was executed with great skill by D. L. Almond, whose pure tone and sensitive phrasing showed notable musicianship and accomplishment.

A selection from Bach's Christmas Oratorio formed the second part of the concert. The soloists were Anne Wood, Arthur Ayton and A. P. Graham-Dixon, all of whom acquitted themselves with intelligence and a distinguished sense of style. Style and scholarship were evident too in the continuo playing of Colin Smith; it is not often that one hears Bach accompanied with such fine judgement and discrimination. The chorus sang with spirit and understanding; the vocal quality and general balance of tone were admirable, although both these things are peculiarly difficult of attainment in a school chorus. The treble voices especially showed evidence of unusually good training. The orchestra has the advantage of a little professional stiffening, but that advantage lies mainly in the extra confidence and courage it gives to amateur performers. It can never disguise incompetence and playing out of tune, and on this occasion such shortcomings appeared to be quite out of the question.

It was my first visit to Westminster School, and it was a great many years since I had attended a school concert anywhere, so that I was deeply impressed by the extraordinary improvement which has taken place in normal artistic standards during the last generation. Our young music-masters have gradually brought a new spirit into school music and have thereby raised the whole standard of musical culture throughout the country. It is now taken for granted that programmes should be severely classical, and the manner of performance shows quite clearly that this is the type of music which schools thoroughly understand and genuinely enjoy. As on this occasion, the music is interpreted with complete conviction and the words are not merely audible but convey their full meaning without effort or affectation. It looks as if singers at Westminster can all read both words and music at sight simultaneously as a matter of course—an accomplishment which in the professional world is comparatively rare. Professional singers, even when they can read notes at sight, generally seem to think that no words, English or foreign, have any meaning whatever.

For the modern popularity of wind instruments, especially among boys, we have to thank the jazz bands, whose arrival some twenty-five years ago stimulated many amateurs to take up the clarinet, the saxophone and the trumpet. Older musicians are reluctant to admit that anything good could have come out of jazz, but it was undoubtedly a great stimulus both to technical accomplishment and to quickness of musical intelligence. This has helped amateurs to understand "modern" music, and it has probably illuminated their outlook on the classics as well.

I take this opportunity of thanking Westminster—and Sir Adrian Boult—for a most stimulating and enjoyable evening of music.

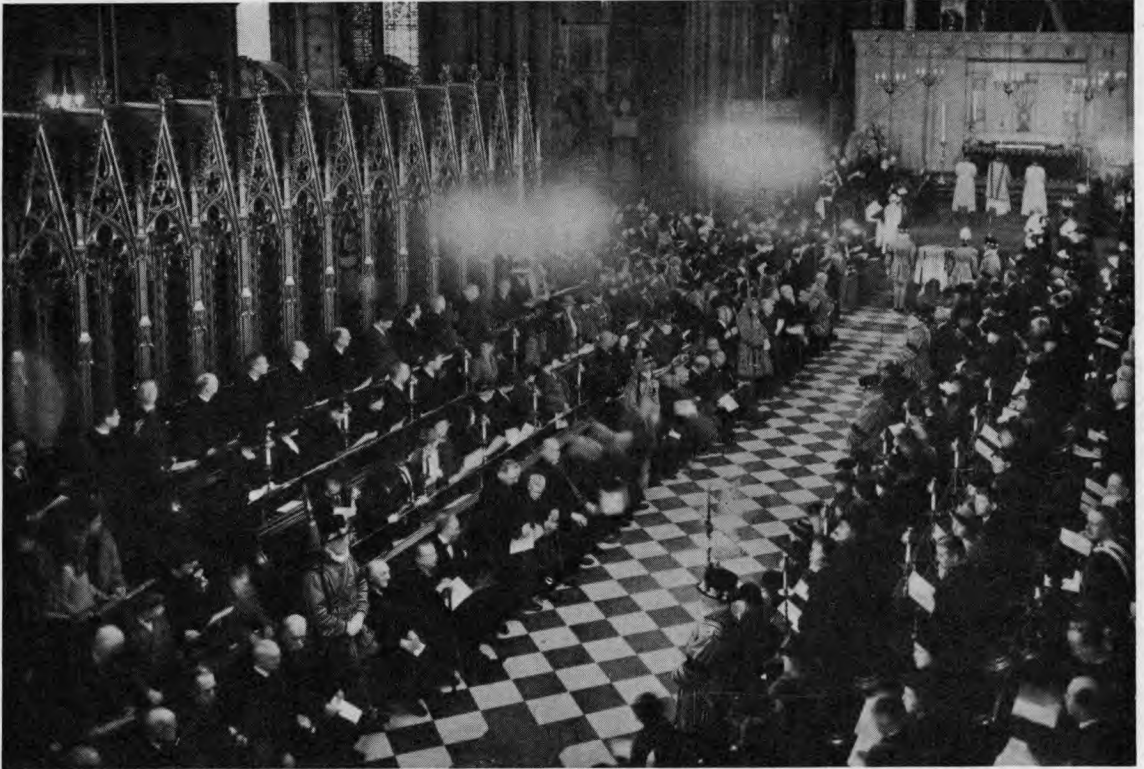

DINNER

TO SIR ADRIAN BOULT

Viscount Davidson gave a dinner party for Sir Adrian Boult in the Jerusalem Chamber before the School Concert on December 16th. Among those present were: The Dean of Westminster, the Mayor of Westminster, Sir George Dyson, Sir Robert Mayer, Professor Edward Dent, Dr. Reginald Thatcher, Mr. Frank Howes, Dr. C. Thornton Lofthouse, Mr. Arnold Foster and the acting Head Master (Mr. D. C. Simpson).

THE ROYAL MAUNDY

THE KING AT THE ABBEY

KING EDWARD VIII AT THE ROYAL MAUNDY SERVICE IN 1936

KING'S Scholars and senior Town Boys were present in the Abbey at the Distribution of the Royal Maundy by the King on March 25th.

The Maundy was brought in procession to the High Altar by a Yeoman of the Guard, who carried on his head an immense silver-gilt alms dish bearing the little white, red and green purses which contained the Maundy itself—as many silver pence as the King is years of age—and other sums of money in lieu of the gifts of food and clothing which were formerly distributed. During the two anthems the King, accompanied by the Lord High Almoner (The Bishop of Lichfield), the Sub-almoner (The Rev. W. H. Elliott) and the Secretary of the Royal Almonry (Mr. Lawrence Tanner), left his seat near the Altar and came down among the old people who were to receive his bounty; and passing slowly up and down the line of recipients he gave the purses to each with a smile and a word of friendly recognition.

The whole ceremony was designed to emphasise the virtue of humility, and the towels with which the Lord High Almoner and his assistants were girt were a reminder of the days when the monarch was accustomed to wash the feet of the poor. In 1661 the Mercurius Politicus Redivivus records that Charles II was “pleased to wash 31 poor men’s feet in the great hall at Whitehall, and gave every man a purse of white leather, in it 31 pence, and a red purse, in it a piece of gold.” This humility of Charles was no doubt a piece of Restoration enthusiasm, for in 1667, Pepys records that “the King did not wash the poor people’s feet himself, but the Bishop of London did it for him.” James II was the last monarch to perform the rite in person, and in 1737 the washing was discontinued, but the Lord High Almoner, as the King’s deputy, continued to distribute the alms. In 1932, for the first time for nearly 250 years, the Sovereign was again present, and King George V’s example has been followed by King Edward VIII and the present King.

THE UNDER SCHOOL

THE Under School was represented at the late Mr. J. R. Turner's Memorial Service in the Abbey by the two boys still remaining who came as new boys in 1943. New life came to Little Dean's Yard on that date, and the Bursar, a not infrequent visitor at lunch time, often remarked on the difference the Under School made to his rather lonely existence.

The 17 boys of 1943 have grown this term to 76 with one leaver and seven new boys. Mr. Buchanan has joined the staff in place of Mr. Johnstone.

The new House Competition has given fresh interest to work and games results, and many excellent home-made models were brought up for judgement by the committee of eight, two boys from each house. Boxing and Gym competitions were both won by Lions who, under P. J. Morley-Jacob's leadership, were the first winners of the House Cup and of the Games Cup, while Tudors, under R. D. E. Pope, won the Work Cup. Of the four matches played by the XI, there was a defeat and a win against the Choir School, a win against an Old Boys' XI and a draw with another junior Westminster XI. A team from the lower forms also played a drawn game with Wagner's School.

The result of the Under School Pancake Greaze was a tie between Jeeves (Form III) and Turner (Form I). The scales showed no difference in weight between the two tired-looking handfuls, and each boy went home the richer by half a crown.

J. T. C.

FOR the past two terms our training has been devoted to preparation for Certificate A. An examination was held in November, and we have reason to be pleased with the result: all Part II candidates passed, and all but two were successful in Part I. The weapon training, once again, reached a high standard and one candidate, A. G. Wedderspoon, got full marks in the Bren gun test. He passed out top of the class. The drill was still rather disappointing, and we must clearly try to improve our standard. Prior to the examination a preliminary test was held to weed out any weak candidates, and in fact nearly a dozen candidates failed to reach the standard, which caused some consternation. Most of those who failed belonged to the school of thought which holds that the examination can be passed by last minute cramming; this may sometimes be the case, but is obviously a gamble. This time fortune did not favour them, and it is unlikely to favour them in the future, for after this term circumstances will be somewhat different from those that have prevailed since our return to London. Up till now all cadets who have passed Certificate A have been almost at once absorbed as N.C.O's. Next term we shall find ourselves with a fairly large number of cadets who have passed Certificate A, and for whom there are no immediate vacancies as instructors. These will be formed into a cadre class for more specialised training; and there will of course be much stronger competition for positions of responsibility.

THE SCOUTS

LAST December twelve first class Scouts took and passed the Meteorological Badge. The examination was held in R.R.S. Discovery. This term, with one or two additions to their number, they are working for the Tracking Badge with Mr. Spaul.

Last term we lost the Troop Leader, B. C. Berkinshaw-Smith, and G. Ll. Law, two scouts of long standing. P. R. Hatt is now Troop Leader, and N. H. Palmer and H. Ward have been promoted to Patrol Leader. J. Robins and P. C. Pearson have joined us, bringing numbers in the Troop up to 42 again, as last term. This increase in size over last year's numbers—there are seven patrols instead of five—is encouraging but adds considerably to the labour of working out a weekly programme.

The local District Commissioner, Mr. Hitch, after long service both as A.D.C. and D.C. in Westminster, has been promoted to Assistant County Commissioner, and has been succeeded by Commander Doble.

There was a Field Day on March 11th at Downe, which proved very useful for all kinds of scouting activity. The Summer camp will be in the Wicklow Mountains, south-west of Dublin. This has been made possible by the great kindness of Mr. M. A. Robinson (O.W.) in securing passages for the Troop.

THE DEBATING SOCIETY

THE Debating Society is still perhaps the most flourishing of all the school societies. Debates are held regularly and the standard of speaking is on the whole very high. Last term, at a debate with King's College, London, the motion "That men are born unequal, and it is illogical to thrust equality upon them" was defeated 14—13, the President exercising his casting vote. On December 15th, the motion "That the policy of the present government is consistent with the best interests of the nation" was debated with about ten Old Westminsters.

Proposer: A. M. Allchin, supported by Mr. T. C. Skeffington-Lodge, M.P. (O.W.).

Opposer: S. J. Steele, supported by Mr. M. Kinchin-Smith (O.W.).

The Proposer declared that the Labour Government preferred sound principles to the Opposition's cheap exploitation of day-to-day difficulties. The Opposer accused the government of breaking its election pledges and lacking consistency, experience and ability. Mr. Skeffington-Lodge thought that Labour's achievement compared favourably with that of the Conservatives after the first World War. Increased social services were making our people better citizens, and our experiment in social democracy was being eagerly watched by Western Europe. Mr. Kinchin-Smith felt that principles were not enough. The government ought to govern. Its nonsensical economic policy was maintaining the risk of inflation; drastic capital cuts should be made at once.

Mr. W. H. Allchin admired the government's handling of imperial problems, especially India and Burma. J. A. C. Spokes thought the country needed efficient rule by business men, not doctrinaire idealists. Mr. R. A. Denniston preferred the Proposer's idealism to the Opposer's "realism." Mr. A. B. Whitelegge felt that other countries had lost confidence in us because of our feeble government. Mr. R. J. H. Williams pointed out that if capital cuts were made, building and industrial re-equipment would suffer—things essential to our welfare. Mr. Churchill's rhetoric concealed an empty mind.

Mr. Kinchin-Smith, summing up, re-emphasised the government's weakness on economic policy, whereas Mr. Skeffington-Lodge declared that a policy of free enterprise and abolition of controls had caused American prices to soar. On being put to the vote the motion was defeated 19—14. A very enjoyable meeting was concluded by an exchange of compliments and thanks.

This term debates have included one on the motion "That censorship of the arts is necessary," defeated 12—11 by the President's casting vote; "That capital punishment should be abolished," carried 12—7.

It has been provisionally decided to hold another informal inter-debate with some Old Westminsters on Tuesday, June 22nd, at about 4.30 p.m. Any Old Westminsters who may be interested are asked to contact the Hon. Secretary, Westminster School Debating Society, 1 Little Dean's Yard, Westminster, S.W.1.

THE POLITICAL AND LITERARY SOCIETY

ON Monday, January 26th, Mr. Douglas Woodruff, Editor of The Tablet, spoke to the Society. The title of his talk was "What do we mean by Europe?" Mr. Woodruff's talk was topical; he doubted the wisdom of a socialist approach to European problems. It would be difficult, he said, for the smaller European powers to take definite action against Russia, nor would they need to. America had risen wonderfully to her responsibilities and would be able to defeat Russia by either peaceful or violent means. Europe was only a small area, but despite everything was still the most important area in the world. Every effort should be made to create unity in Western Europe, even if political union was not a possibility. Meanwhile we must await the crucial struggle between America and Russia. Mr. Woodruff's was a witty and interesting exposition of a definite point of view and he did not hesitate to commit himself.

Dr. G. P. Gooch, President of the Historical Association, has promised to come and talk to the Society during the Election term.

THE ESSAY SOCIETY

There is still a marked reluctance on the part of most members of the Society to writing essays, but S. J. Barrett successfully overcame this and on January 30th he read his essay on "The American Way of Life." Well qualified to write on this subject, having divided his life almost equally between the New and the Old Worlds, and therefore understanding and correlating the two, he depicted the Americans as young and vital, sometimes a little too permanently adolescent for English taste, yet with a specific charm of their own. Essays of this kind inevitably further international understanding and goodwill.

FOOTBALL

RESULTS have been disappointing, but taking into account the fact that most of the team will be with us next season, and that four of the regular members of the first eleven are colts, there is every reason to hope that the remedy is at hand. This hope is supported by the close scores in the first eleven matches, most of which were lost by the odd goal, and by the good record of the Colts, who were only beaten once.

Against Lancing, Highgate and Aldenham we lost by the odd goal, and with more luck all these matches might have been won, particularly at Aldenham, where we suffered two injuries while in the lead. The score at Charterhouse was a true reflection of the play, and we were beaten by a side clearly superior in all departments. Winchester (0—2) were the heavier and faster side in a game in which there was a noticeable lack of skill.

The team was admirably led by Anderson and Almond in turn, both playing consistently well throughout the season. Guymer was a tireless worker, and played really well in several matches. Momtchiloff proved his versatility by many good performances in goal and later at inside forward. Griffiths and Steward developed a sound understanding, their covering and positional play saving many awkward situations. G. Smith is developing into a first-class half-back, and Cantrell, though slow, proved a constructive schemer. Pitamber's dash and opportunism provided most danger in attack, and with more support he should score many goals. Anderson and Guymer played for Southern Schools and afterwards for Public Schools against Corinthian Casuals.

The Colts, though never at full strength, developed into a good combination under Robinson. They were particularly well served by C. C. P. Williams, Membrey, Milligan and Kendall.

The League competition was won by Ashburnham and Homeboarders, with Busby's runners-up. There is no doubt that the general standard of play has risen considerably since the competition was begun.

With much young talent in the School, we may be confident that, provided we maintain our efforts, we shall soon obtain good results in our matches.

FENCING

The arrival of a second instructor has taken a great burden from the teams, who are no longer weighed down by the task of teaching. Mr. Richards has already proved himself an excellent teacher for the younger fencers, through his patience and understanding.

Seniors, Juniors, and Lamprobaties were all won by King's Scholars, who are admittedly fortunate in having the majority of the school team; the Johnson Guinea Pools for beginners were won, in a final pool of a very high standard, by V. Herbert (B) after a close struggle with A. Capon (R).

The climax of the season was perhaps in the Old Westminster match, in which we were soundly beaten by a team consisting of E. B. Christie, D. M. Paterson, H. Ball and U. L. Wendon, who though not an O.W. kindly deputised for Dr. Turquet, who was prevented from coming. In the Foil and Sabre we did not win a single fight, but in the Epée we were forfortunate in beating them 7—2, and so preserving our unbeaten record in that weapon.

Other results were :

- Jan. 31st v. Whitgift. Won 20—7. (Foil 7—2, Epée 7—2, Sabre 6—3).
- Feb. 7th v. Lancing. Won 18—8. (Foil 5—4, Epée 7—1, Sabre 6—3).

OBITUARY

WE record with regret the deaths of the following Old Westminsters :

PERCY TRIQUET BROWNING was born in 1882 and entered the School as a non-resident Queen's Scholar in 1895. He was elected to Trinity College, Cambridge with an exhibition in Mathematics and Science and was ordained in 1905 to a curacy at St. George's, Camberwell. In 1915 he became a Chaplain to the Forces and was attached to St. Thomas' Hospital (at that time No. 5 London General Hospital). After the War he was for sixteen years Vicar of All Souls, Leeds, and was afterwards at Brighton and East Blatchington. He married Etheldred, daughter of Jarvis Kenrick of Bletchingley.

HENRY TREVISA CLARKE, who died in his 84th year on December 24th last, entered Westminster in 1872 and was admitted into College in the following year. He became a shipbuilder and a member of the Institute of Naval Architects. From 1916 to 1919 he was in the Ministry of Shipping as Superintendent of ship-repairs in North-West Ireland. He married in 1894 Margaret Evelyn, daughter of W. H. Sale, of Derby.

It was with deep regret that we heard of the sudden death of Mr. JESSE COUGHTRY, who had been groundsman at Grove Park since its purchase by the School in 1935. It was he who discovered the ground, and it was owing to his untiring efforts that what had been a rough field was speedily converted into good football and cricket pitches. Throughout the War he maintained the ground in excellent condition, and both the School and the Old Westminsters are sensible of the debt of gratitude which they owe him. It was a matter for regret that the distance from Westminster made it impossible to have net-practice at Grove Park, for Coughtry was a good coach and wished very much that he could have had more chance of helping the School cricket. He was due to retire at the end of the summer term, and we take this opportunity of expressing to his widow our very sincere sympathy in her tragic loss, and our sorrow that he did not live to enjoy the well-deserved leisure to which they were both looking forward.

GILBERT COTTON JOHNSTON who was born in 1896, was at the School from 1909—1913. At the outbreak of the First World War he joined the H.A.C. His death occurred on January 23rd, 1948, at the age of 51.

SAMUEL WHITTILL KEY, the son of Samuel Key, Old Westminster, entered the School from Haileybury in 1888 but only remained there for a year. He subsequently went up to Cambridge and was ordained in 1899 to a curacy at North Walsham. In 1905 he became Vicar of Cleator, Cumberland and five years later of All Saints, Ipswich. In 1914 he became a Chaplain to the Forces. In 1922 he was appointed Rector of Great Blakenham and in 1928 he was transferred to the Vicarage of Fulford, Yorks., where his father had resided. He married Katherine Hilda, daughter of the Rev. J. C. Browne, D.D.

JASPER FREDERICK MORE, who died on November 15th, 1947, in his 72nd year was admitted to Westminster in January, 1889 and went into College the same year. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1903 and eventually became Chancery Registrar. He received the O.B.E. for his services in the Military Intelligence Department of the War Office during the First World War. He married Rosamund Winifred, daughter of W. M. Phillips of Weeping Cross.

WILLIAM PARKER, who died on November 28th, 1947, at the age of 64, entered the School in 1898. In the 1914-18 war he held a commission in the Grenadier Guards. He married Mabel, daughter of George Shrubbsall of Reigate.

CHARLES JOHN MURRAY WEST was at Westminster from 1918 to 1920 and afterwards became a numismatist. He was married and is survived by a widow and one son.

We apologize for an error in the obituary notice of Mr. R. E. Nott-Bower in our last issue. The final sentence should read: "He married Mary Dorothy, daughter of Professor H. McLeod, F.R.S."

CORRESPONDENCE

TRADITIONS

To the Editors of THE ELIZABETHAN

Sirs.—The interesting article "Now or Never" in your November issue raised the problem of the retention, revival or abandonment of old school traditions, but made no attempt to offer a solution.

The outstanding features of Old Westminsters (and I speak, obviously, subject to wide and numerous exceptions) are their efficiency, versatility, good manners and smart turn-out.

The School is a small one—this makes for versatility, and, in my time at least, a large teaching staff made small classes possible. A boy with a crooked spine might not be able to play soccer or to join the O.T.C.; whereupon he was made to defend himself against guardsmen with a sabre; camp with the scouts on the moors in drenching rain; play chess; declaim; sing an oratorio; and clean a monitor's shoes.

As to good manners (always to be sharply distinguished from "charm"), I well recall a master saying that Westminster boys seemed to him to have more savoir faire than those of the same age from other schools. This I believe to have been true, and it was due no doubt to our presence in London, to our share in state occasions, to our week-ends "off" in the great city, and to the large amount of entertaining done by the school. Turn-out was in general good. So far as feeling "out of place" in a topper and tails is concerned, I fail to see why 1947 is any worse than any other year since 1919. And since a topper that is not well groomed looks appalling, the great majority of boys in my day took the trouble to look smart.

Surely the problem of traditions nearly solves itself? Those which clearly enhance these characteristics, such as close associations with the Throne and the Houses of Parliament, should be restored or maintained, and the remainder should be allowed to die a natural and painless death.

Yours faithfully,
MICHAEL V. ARGYLE.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL WAR MEMORIAL

To the Editors of THE ELIZABETHAN

Sirs.—The Committee has decided to have the names of Old Westminsters killed in the two World Wars inscribed in two volumes, and appeals for special donations towards the expense of having them suitably illuminated and bound.

It has also decided to open a special fund to meet the cost of replacing the oak chairs up School which were destroyed by enemy action or damaged during the evacuation; the suggested donation is £3 3s. 0d. Full details of the Fund will be sent on application.

The Pancake Fund is still open, and it is hoped that all O.W.W. who ever took part in the Greaze will send a small contribution.

Yours faithfully,
E. R. B. GRAHAM, Secretary.

Help RESEARCH to conquer CANCER

Research has its Victories

The great work of the British Empire Cancer Campaign will end only when the cause and cure of all forms of cancer have been discovered.

Much has already been achieved from its efforts.

1. Important new methods of effective treatment.
2. Greater readiness of sufferers to seek early diagnosis, which either disposes of their anxiety, or gives more hope of successful treatment.
3. Control of certain types of cancer. The furtherance of this Campaign is everybody's cause.

The British Empire Cancer Campaign will continue as a voluntary organisation to subsidise and co-ordinate cancer research, even after the implementation of the new National Health Service Act, (1946).

Funds are urgently needed for this great cause

Legacy forms supplied on request. Please address your gift or enquiry to the Appeals Secretary, (Dept. 81).
